Introduction

The main educational and research fields of the Department of Technical Informatics are related to the application of informatics in measurement technology, instrumentation, analogue and digital electronics, sensor signal conditioning, signal processing, process control, robotics and related hardware and software development. Members of our staff participate in extensive educational, research and development activity in various fields of engineering, physics, chemistry, and biomedical studies.